WHAT IS MARKETING?

Marketing is the process of planning and executing the conception, pricing, promotion, and distribution of ideas, goods, and services. It encompasses the processes by which businesses tailor their offerings to meet customer demand and how they can anticipate and influence customer needs. Marketing techniques combine principles of economics, psychology, and sociology in a business context. Most organizations develop marketing strategies to help them identify and target specific segments of the population and then find the most effective ways to influence those individuals to purchase their products or services. Advertising, public relations, promotions, sales, and market research are all occupations which fall under the general marketing umbrella, and each has a unique role to play in the marketing process.
